By Kathleen Hou @kathleenhou

It's a fantasy gift for any skin care lover: Convince five of New York's best and busiest dermatologists to tell you exactly what to buy at Sephora. For our new installment of "What Should I Get," The Cut made it happen. We convinced several practitioners who treat Very Famous Faces to pick what they consider to be the best skin care and makeup products all while sticking to a $100 limit.

Here are their selections — read on for the two skin care brands that they recommended over and over again, plus the sunscreen that actually helps your makeup look better.

Drunk Elephant The Littles™

Drunk Elephant is a brand that I have heard the most positive feedback about, regarding its “natural” ingredients and efficacy. It’s one I continue to recommend and is worth the investment. This set is a great way to test out the line — it’s travel-friendly, and targets the most common concerns, which are discoloration and brightening. It is also good for all skin types.

There is a cleanser, day and night serums, moisturizer, face oil, and SPF. These products can all be mixed and matched for a day-to-night routine. The best part is that there is enough variety, so you can test out what works best for your skin.
