

These Are the Skin Care Products Dermatologists Won't Travel Without

Holiday travel season is upon us, which means that you have to condense your whole life into bags small enough to make the journey via planes, trains and automobiles. Even the most practiced travel pro can't help but get a little freaked out about packing a skin care regimen for the trip: exactly what of all your beauty loot is critical enough to make the trip?

We reached out to some of the top dermatologists in the country to get the must-have skin care product they absolutely would not travel without. Want to know which essentials make the grade for the people who make their skin in the skin care game? Let's find out.

Dr. Paul Jarrod Frank, Celebrity Cosmetic Dermatologist and founder of the PFRANKMD brand and PFRANKMD Skin Salons

"I'm a big believer in hydration when traveling, so I always tend to pack MDNA The Rose Mist, $120. I find it refreshing and awakening. It smells amazing (always a great perk) and gives my skin a dewy glow. It's formulated with mineral-rich thermal waters of Montecatini, Italy, which are anti-inflammatory and therapeutic to the skin. It's great for anyone with any skin type who needs a quick boost on the go."
